

Letter: Anti-NISP statements 'inflammatory'

Once again I hope Mr. Gary Wockner and the other members of the Save the Poudre organization are down wading in the Poudre River and are again watching thousands of acre feet of Colorado's water head for the Gulf of Mexico because of inadequate storage. Over 1 million acre feet of Colorado's water has ended up there in the past 10 years because of inadequate storage.

It would certainly be nice if Mr. Wockner would abandon his worn out inflammatory, unprovable premise that the NISP project would turn the Poudre river into a "Mosquito infested muddy stinking ditch," and instead live up to the agreement that environmental groups made in the '80s that a storage facility might be built in return for the upper 65 miles of the Poudre river being named Wild and Scenic, precluding any storage project being built on this section of the river.

Mr. Wockner has somehow forgotten those who came before us and planned water storage projects so we all could live in Larimer County with an adequate water supply, and he seemingly wants to abandon those that will come after us in regard to an adequate water supply.
